Regarding Results

Before we close this out, we want to offer some real talk and a reality check.

This is not a “get rich quick” scheme. A real career is built upon a foundation of hard work and sacrifice where you continually add value to your audience. Profit is and will always be the applause of service to your audience. Coaching Fuel is meant to teach you the processes and systems that have been used to build successful careers. If your expectation is to become an overnight success by flipping a switch, this program isn't for you. But, if you're ready and willing to put in the effort required to become a success, then let's get moving.

By joining Coaching Fuel, you're making an investment in yourself, and just like with any investment, it carries the potential for great reward, as well as the risk of loss. Whether you experience reward or loss is up to you. Your own decisions and level of commitment will determine your success. We commit to stick with you until you recoup your money invested in our program, with the caveat that if you are not putting in the effort or doing the work we outline, that commitment is voided. That determination will be solely ours.

By joining Coaching Fuel, you agree to not hold us liable for your decisions, actions, or results, at any time, or under any circumstance. We will provide as much value and support to you as we possibly can, but if you're not willing to put in the work, nothing we could do or give you will help you succeed.

Sound good? Great. Now let's get to work and build something amazing.
